

SUFFERIN SUCCOTASH!

July 8, 2005

Sakes Alive! The sizzling summer sun is savagely scorching the sensitive skins of some selected seniors.

Subsequently Ol' Sol serenely sails the southerly skies as he silently searches for some more suckers with scanty shirts or sun suits, swimming and splashing in the salt water, sans sunscreen.

The solution is surprisingly simple. Stay inside, seated, and satisfied, sipping and swallowing sake or sodas until satiated!

So, it seems, goes the saga of the Schumakers, who are still searching the states for some more of the Sequoia statue sculptures.

We commenced our sojourn a little late this year, and along with heading East to the deserts, we must be nuts!

At the present time we are in a nice RV park in St David, AZ. After a few days here, we will head for Las Cruces, NM to see the first sculpture of the season on Peter Toths' Trail of Tears. Pictured here, is the one that we found in Desert Hot Springs, 40 miles from our house!

The usual still applies, if you do not want to receive this stuff for any reason, please let me know and I will take your address out of the journal list.

Something new this year, we will be joined in our travels by our friends the Lowry's. They will leave us in Denver, CO.
